Why MetLife Pet Insurance didn't make the cut: MetLife's pet insurance policies are underwritten by two separate insurers, and the policy's terms and benefits vary depending on the insurer.

Waiting periods   Your insurance won't pay for care until a waiting period has elapsed. Most companies require at least 14 days before they will reimburse an illness-related claim. Longer waiting periods may apply to orthopedic conditions.

Pre-existing conditions - Pet insurance providers will not reimburse for conditions your dog, cat, or other pet already had before you bought the insurance policy. Some examples include diabetes, allergies, cancer or arthritis.

Many insurers distinguish between curable and incurable pre-existing conditions.

 For example, the United States Fire Insurance Company - the underwriter behind ASPCA, Spot and Pumpkin's pet insurance policies - excludes chronic pre-existing conditions but will cover curable ones such as ear infections or dermatological conditions. The only requirement is that the pet remains symptom- and treatment-free for six months.

 'the spread' is one of them: the fee paid by a trader to open a position; the second is 'the bet size,' which is the sum of capital the trader puts in it.

 Suppose trader P has expected that the cost of shares of this company will increase soon.

It helps the trader decide whether to go long or short; if the market shows growth, then the trader would go long or vice-versa.

 Traders can gain proceeds if the market runs as per the expectation.
