Spread betting is any of various types of wagering on the outcome of an event where the pay-off is based on the accuracy of the wager, rather than a simple "win or lose" outcome, such as fixed-odds (or money-line) betting or parimutuel betting.

Sports books are generally permitted to state "ties win" or "ties lose" to avoid the necessity of refunding every bet.

The goal of the casino is to set a line that encourages an equal amount of action on both sides, thereby guaranteeing a profit.

In the United Kingdom, sports spread betting became popular in the late 1980s by offering an alternative form of sports wagering to traditional fixed odds, or fixed-risk, betting.

But if the team only scores 300 runs then the gambler will have lost 50 unit points multiplied by their initial stake.

In addition to the spread bet, a very common "side bet" on an event is the total (commonly called the over/under or O/U) bet.

Financial spread betting is a way to speculate on financial markets in the same way as trading a number of derivatives.

[7] A report from Cass Business School found that only 1 in 5 gamblers ends up a winner.
