The state Senate on Monday rejected a constitutional amendment that would have a llowed voters to decide whether to legalize sports gambling, while the state Hou se never took up a bill that would have authorized sports gambling without such an amendment.

Bill Cowsert, an Athens Republican who sponsored the measure.

But House Speaker Jon Burns never called it to the floor for debate.

"The folks that advocated for the for the sports betting bill worked very d iligently," Burns said.

The failures show how far lawmakers are from reaching an agreement, with Cowsert later telling reporters "there's so many crosscurrents" among law makers who want different things.

Marty Harbin, a Tyrone Republican.

Supporters of the House approach disagreed.

Former state Supreme Court Justice Harold Melton wrote an opinion for the Metro

Atlanta Chamber of Commerce earlier this year asserting that sports betting cou ld be authorized without amending the state Constitution.
