State officials released draft rules Wednesday that explain how Maine will implement a new sports betting law.

The law, which Gov.

“I know everybody wants it either out during the Super Bowl or out during March Madness,” he told reporters Wednesday at the Department of Public Safety in Augusta.

“But let’s face it, it’s just not going to happen.

Still, he said he’s hopeful sports wagering will be up and running in time for Maine’s summer tourism season.

“If they want to sit by their campsite with their iPhones and bet on the Red Sox game, it would be great for them to have the ability to do that,” he said.

“Because when they’re in Maine and they make a transaction in Maine, Maine gets the revenue.

Projections by Champion’s office and betting sportsbooks estimate that Maine could bring in anywhere from $3.
