What is the spread in sports betting?

The spread, also referred to as the line, is used to even the odds between two unevenly matched teams.

For example, the Colts are a -3 point favorite against the Texans.

The -3 points is the spread.

If you want to bet the Colts on the spread, it would mean the Colts need to win by at least three points for you to win the bet.

While betting the Colts moneyline leads to a smaller payout, an underdog moneyline bet on the Texans would yield more money because you'd get money on them winning the game straight up.
