Ip questioned why the club was "so angry" and said it was not the first time she had raised the possibility of this happening, adding it had come up three times in the past.

7 billion for football betting, more than the HK$19.

Arguing against any tax increase, the club claimed it would be the charities that depend on it for funding that would suffer, saying operating revenue would plunge 40 per cent resulting in a "zero surplus at best or more likely a negative one".

"Under these circumstances, government will only receive less but not more tax and duties.

"I do not think the government will really act on the club, I do not see that coming certainly.

But are we in a position where we cannot even suggest anything now?" Ip said she did not object to the idea of the club offering betting on other sports, with Formula One and the NBA particularly popular with offshore companies, and added the club should take the lead in changing what people were allowed to wager on.

"I am open to having more legalised sports for betting purposes," she said.

The perceived stronger team (the favorite) must win by a certain number of points/runs/goals to cash your bet.

The Ravens are a -7 favorite against the Jets.
