This is usually the case with public betting trends, as the public's money tends to make its way into a conversation when deciding where to lean on for a specific game or event.

These trends can provide valuable insights into the betting market and can be used by customers to make more informed decisions when placing their bets. This can lead to more favorable odds for the team that is receiving less public support.

5 points.

5 more points than they imagined.

When customers are interested in wagering on the favorite, it is likely that wagering on the earlier side works out in their favor.

On the flip side, it is rare for the public to rush towards an underdog that isn't the favorite in the matchup.
